Small Mfg. Co., Ltd., MILWAUKEE, Nov. 15, 1887.
GENTLEMEN: Your Hammockette Chair I recently purchased is the greatest comfort I ever possessed. I would not do without it any more than without a carpet on my parlor floor. No matter how tired I may be, I find complete rest when I get in this chair; but as every one else in the house wants to use it
I am afraid I shall have to get another for the sake of peace in the family.
Yours truly,
BRADLEY BOOTH.

to get ELEGANT JAPANESE SCREENS

Direct from the manufacturer and importer, at prices hitherto unapproached, and of a quality only handled by the finest trade at fancy figures.

To those who have never used these Screens we would say, that while they are a most elegant addition to any room as an article of furniture and decoration, they by no means their chief adaptability. To put before a draughty door or window before an open window in summer, admitting light and air, yet insuring privacy around baby's bath, the invalid's bed and hundreds of other uses.

To those who may have purchased one of the flimsy affairs commonly sold as Japanese Screens, which promptly fell to pieces, we would say that we guarantee our Screens to be of the best materials and workmanship and to wear for years with ordinary usage.

WE have to thank the Rev. Mr. Talmage for the assurance that our neighbors who were drowned at Johnstown were not overwhelmed because of their sins. Dr. Talmage had been to Johnstown and knew the folks there, and he does not hesitate to say that they were as good people as one finds anywhere, and that the notion that they are special victims of God's wrath is erroneous.

This is a comforting assurance, and LIFE has no doubt that the surviving friends of the Johnstown people will thank Dr. Talmage for sticking up for them under circumstances that were at least suspicious.

THE truth is that Dr. Talmage might have gone farther and relieved the Almighty of special complicity in the Johnstown flood altogether. Some contemporaries, piously disposed, speak of the flood as a "mysterious providence," and bow reverently to the "inscrutable rulings" of our common Father, quoting Alexander Pope's assertion that "whatever is, is good." Dear friends, the flood wasn't good at all. Undoubtedly it called out pity and courage and sympathy, which are good things, but it also brought out avarice and brutality, which are vile, and endless pain and misery, which are very, very objectionable. It wasn't sent for any wise purpose; there were no inscrutable dealings in it. It wasn't sent at all. It was incurred.

THIS much God had to do with that dreadful flood—he ordained that water should run down hill. All the rest of the responsibility rests with man, and the preachers and every one else who fail to recognize that make a serious mistake. God never concealed from man that water would run down hill. Man knows it. He knew that if he got in the way it would run over him, and that if it was deep enough it would drown him. Knowing these things, Man put a lake behind an insufficient barrier, and sat down below it and waited for it to come. It did come, and oh, poor Man! What a wreck it made of him! But it was he that did it, not God.

God has made the world subject to certain general laws. Man lives here and makes it his business to find out as much as he can about these laws, and to conform to them as closely as he is able. He tries to make Nature his slave and tool. He roosts on her carcass, lives on her, harnesses and drives her, and devises all the means he can to make her useful to him in his business. She's extremely useful, and every year he finds new capacities that God stored in her, and he develops and applies them. But now and then Nature gets away from him, runs over him, and smashes him up. Sometimes it is because he is heedless—as at Johnstown; sometimes because Nature is bigger than he, as when the earth opens and swallows him. God looks on and sees Nature yielding up her secrets one by one to man, and occasionally overwhelming him by her powers, but He doesn't interfere—at least, it seems not. Whether a good man or a bad man pounds his finger, it hurts just the same, and the nail comes off. The rascal gets rich just as fast as the philanthropist, if he uses the right methods.

IN all of which, men and brethren, the comfort lies in this—that if God seems not to interfere with natural laws, neither does he with spiritual laws. Water running down hill does not more surely indicate the existence of a natural law than differences of character indicate spiritual laws. Some men are brave, are gentle, are faithful, patient, good. They didn't happen so, they grew so, they and their fathers, in accordance with law. Other men are beastly, treacherous liars. They didn't happen so either; they grew so, they and their fathers, and others may grow like them by following the same methods. The way to avoid being smashed by a convulsion of Nature is to learn enough of Nature's laws to know when she is likely to have a convulsion, and then to stand from under. The way to grow good and avoid being a beast is to try to get some notion of the spiritual laws by which character grows, and, when found, to steer by them. They are just as sure as the natural laws, but the knowledge of them is not half so common, nor half so much sought. And that is queer enough, for not only is character the priceless part of us while we live, but when Nature has finally bowled us down it is all there is to set up in that other alley over the gulf.

WHO but Prof. Charles Eliot Norton would permit himself or be allowed, in this hustling democratic age, to write with gentle approval, in the Atlantic Monthly, of Rawdon Brown, an Englishman who spent the last fifty years of his life in Venice, and thanked God that he could. He couldn't go home, he said; he had been living too long with gentlemen for that, meaning the gentlemen who built Venice, not those who dwell there now.

Odds are offered that, by way of compassing the ends of justice, Mr. Brown was sent to Arkansas when he died.

"THE WRONG BOX."

"NOTHING like a little judicious levity," Robert Louis Stevenson quotes one of his characters as saying in the preface to the story which he has written, with his step-son Lloyd Osbourne, and entitled "The Wrong Box" (Scribner's). It is as "a little judicious levity" of a very amusing sort that this fantastic tale must be received. In it there are many indications of the same grotesque fancy which gave us "The Dynamiter" and the "New Arabian Nights." Perhaps it is broader farce than these, and not so finished a piece of work; a fastidious reader might say that the fun was occasionally a little strained, the eccentricities pushed a little too far.

But, all in all, it is of its own kind, outside of comparison with the work of any other writer, and interesting from first

MEN WERE DECEIVERS EVER.

"YER SEE, CLEMENTINA PUT IT ON ME FINGER LAS' NIGHT WITH A WISH, AN' I WISH TER GIT OUT O' THIS TOWN JUS' AS QUICK AS POSSIBLE. WHAT CAN YER GIVE ME ON IT?"

to last. The strange wanderings of a corpse in a water-butt are not a very pleasant subject for a tale, even after a Broadway grand piano is substituted for the cask as a receptacle for the body. But in a burlesque, one considers all such things as inanimate properties—a part of the stage setting.

THE most humorous characters in the story are Michael Finsbury, the attorney, and William Dent Pitman, the unfortunate artist. The episode of Finsbury's holiday is the best fun in the book, full of vivacity and incongruity. Very near it is Gideon Forsyth's delightful idea to masquerade as the Maestro Jimson, who retires to a dilapidated house-boat to compose an opera. To his surprise his uncle and sweetheart are his neighbors in a boat anchored within a stone's throw.

The chief merits of the story are its abundant incidents, ingenious complications, and rapid movement. If it were a play the actors would be changing costumes with celerity, frequently darting in and out, while the scenery would continually creak upon pulleys and ways as it slid about before your eyes.

AMONG the many new books which deserve special mention are the new edition in one handy volume of "Amiel's Journal" (Macmillan), which Mrs. Ward translated before she became famous as a novelist; Prof. A. S. Hill's collection of admirable essays on "Our English" (Harper's); Lee Meriwether's lively narrative of his investigations among

LITERARY NOTE.

MR. CASEY'S ARTICLE "A LIGHT-ED CIGAR," LATELY CONTRIBUTED TO ONE OF OUR LOCAL MAGAZINES, HAS ELEVATED HIM TO UNEXPECTED HEIGHTS IN THE LITERARY WORLD.

"DON'T YOU KNOW ANY BETTER, JOHNNIE, THAN TO USE MY BEST FRINGE TOWELS?"

"NO, THEY AIN'T EITHER, I TOOK THE FRINGE OFF."

ANOTHER MYSTERY.

AN unprecedented number of complaints from subscribers have been pouring into the offices of many periodicals during the last few months caused by the non-delivery of their journals. Now, this is very mysterious. The fault is evidently with the New York Post Office, improbable as it may seem. Mr. Pearson, who was removed by Wanamaker & Co., was, to be sure, an expert, and had a thorough mastery of the system; but, on the other hand, Mr. Van Cott, who was put in his place, also by Wanamaker & Co., is not only one of the "Boys," but is a staunch Tammany man.

It is all very mysterious and difficult to understand.

EXPERT TESTIMONY.

LITTLE NAN, of four summers, considering it her duty to entertain a lady who is waiting for mamma, enters into conversation—

NAN: Have you got any little girls?

THE CALLER: Yes, I have two.

NAN: D-do you ever have to whip 'em?

THE CALLER: I'm afraid I have to, sometimes.

NAN: What do you whip 'em with?

THE CALLER (amused): Oh, when they've been very naughty, I take my slipper.

NAN (most feelingly, as mamma enters): Y-yo-you ought to use a hair-brush; my mamma does, and it hurts awfully.

ONE P.M. in New York—Van Cott.

NEW YORK newspaper men are lost in admiration of the enterprise of the editor of the Herald, who has evidently taken the first steps looking to the dispatch of an exploring expedition into Africa. The first requisite in such cases is that some one should be lost. So where is Bennett?

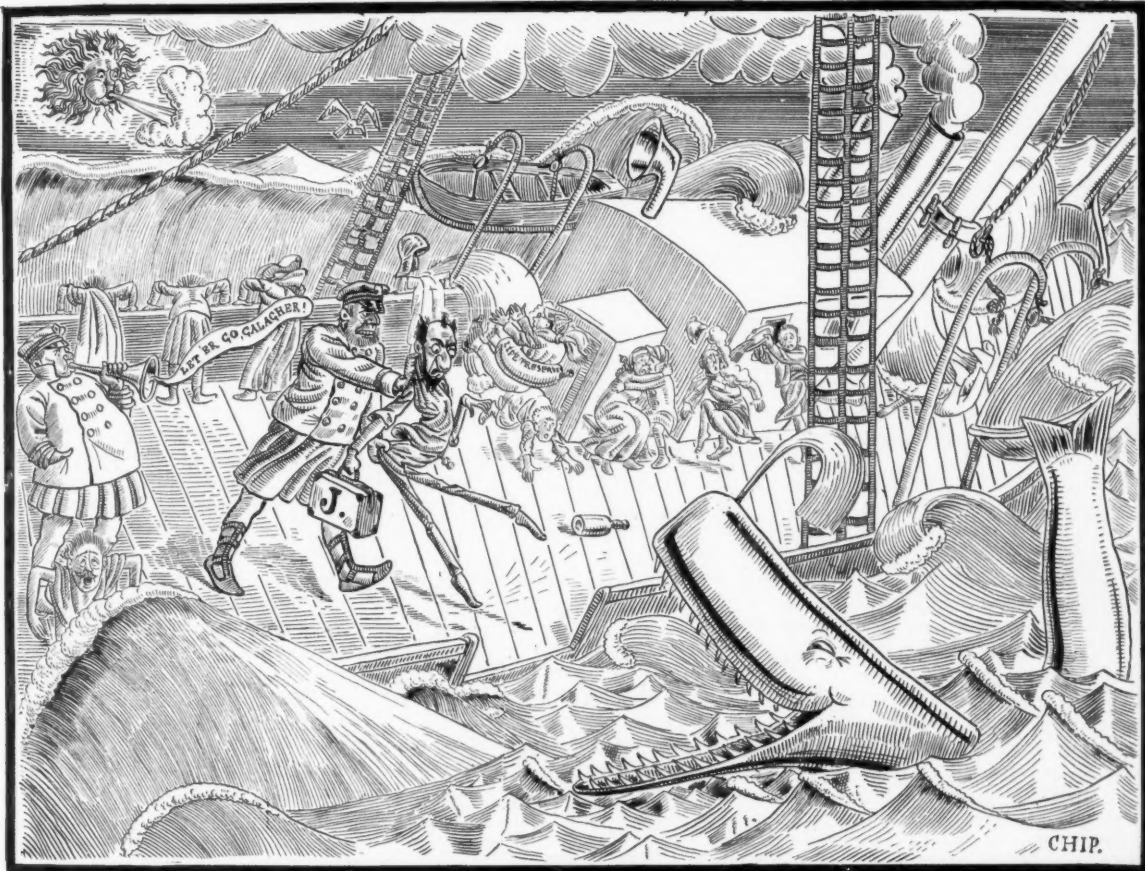

WHILE Europe is industriously engaged in shipping her paupers and convicts to the United States, the United States is just as busy shipping her millionaires and their families to Europe. It doesn't take a political economist to determine in whose favor is the balance of trade.

WHO will say now that corporations have no souls? The philanthropic efforts of the Westinghouse Electric Company to save Murderer Kemmler from being shocked to death with a current generated by a Westinghouse dynamo is touching in the extreme. How noble in comparison with the inaction of the Edison Company which sits idly by and contributes not one cent toward the saving of poor Kemmler.

THE Christian Scientists, in speaking of themselves, abbreviate the title to "Scientists." There certainly could be no worse misnomer. The practices of these "Scientists" are as far removed from anything that's scientific as in most cases they are from anything that's Christian or honest. Playing on the credulity of people with a view to tapping their pocket-books is only scientific in the same sense that we speak of a "scientific skin."

"That's just it," explained Bjenkins, still more sadly. "Miss Cræsus seems to agree with them."—Somerville Journal.

MR. EINSTEIN: His first commission! Ish dot so? GUIDE (showing places of historic interest): It was in this room that Washington received his first commission.

"Yes, sir; it is a fact."
"Vot percentage of commission did he get?"
—Boston Beacon.

ETHEL (entering parlor): Oh, Aggie, so glad to see you! (they kiss.) Why, you are engaged to be married.

AGGIE: How do you know, Ethel?
ETHEL: I can tell by the way you kiss.—Moonshin.

"MORAL: INSURE IN THE TRAVELERS."

THE ELSMERE CART

Is remarkable for style and utility. It will carry either two or four ladies and gentlemen. There is ample space under the seats for wraps, hampers and baggage. One horse can draw an Elsmere Cart and four people easily and rapidly. It is finished in natural wood, either ash, oak or white wood, as desired, varnished, and upholstered in pigskin. For photographs, prices, etc., address the builders, HORTON & CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Mrs. Ayer's Open Letter.

June 7, 1889.
During the past two weeks I have received over twelve hundred letters and telegrams of sympathy and congratulation. Many of those communications are from strangers, and a number bear no address. I should like every human creature who has thought kindly of me during these past weeks, and above all I should like every mother to know how profoundly grateful I am for every gentle thought or word they have given me. In the darkest hour of my life the quick response to my position as a mother, battling for her children, came to me as a benediction, and will remain with me always.

PERFUME OF WOOD VIOLETS.

This exquisite perfume is made from the true violets. In the past the high price of the genuine violet perfume has prevented many from indulging in this luxury, but the price of this article makes it a necessity to those who love the flower. The remembrance of the cheap imitations of violet water and extracts should not prevent all lovers of violets from trying this delicious perfume.
